

MPDV Training & Certification –

Current information on our HYDRA training and training locations with regards to the Covid-19

Dear customers and interested parties of our HYDRA training,

As a result of the Covid-19 virus, we are currently subject to certain restrictions in our daily business.

It is MPDV's primary goal to continue to support you in your training needs and in your project work with high quality training.

We have now the opportunity to communicate our knowledge in equal quality with our online training facilities. This allows us to avoid delays to achieve our common project goals.

As of 23 March 2020 we are changing all on-site training courses at MPDV locations to online training until further notice.

We achieve comparable results through online training with the advantage that attendance is possible from the home office or the workplace.

Therefore, we confirm all new registrations for our training with immediate effect as taking part in the corresponding online training.

What do I need for an online training?

1. Technical conditions

You need a PC or tablet with an internet connection and a browser application. Our trainers will provide you with an access to the online training via e-mail before the training.

You can log on to the training from your office as well as from your home office.

We just need a mail address in order to invite you to the training.

2. Training contents

The trainer of the online training conveys the content of the standard training by remotely transmitting it to all subscribers who booked the training.

All our trainers are familiar with the remote tools used and are available to you with our specialist know-how and for any technical questions.

Our trainer communicates the knowledge via the training presentation and uses the relevant HYDRA applications (MOC, AIP and SMA) during the training.

The trainer presents all exercises on the training system.

As usual with our standard training, the trainer answers all of your questions individually and thoroughly.

3. Terms and conditions

When participating in the online training we grant a discount of 10% compared to the class room ones, as the costs for our internal infrastructure and catering do not occur.

Your travel to our training location and possible hotel costs for training courses over a number of days are also eliminated if you book an online training course.

We are looking forward to your registration for our online trainings!
